

James Hubler, MD, JD, is a graduate of Southern Illinois University's M.D. J.D. program, a combined six-year law and medicine program. Dr. Hubler is board-certified in emergency medicine and is a member of the American College of Emergency Physicians, Medical Legal Committee. He is also a board member of the American College of Legal Medicine.

Dr. Hubler is an Assistant Clinical Professor at the University of Illinois College in Peoria, Illinois. He was the Executive Editor of the ED Legal Letter for three years and has written and lectured extensively on risk management issues in emergency medicine. He has lectured nationally on EMTALA – The Emergency Medicine Treatment and Active Labor Act. Dr. Hubler works as a risk consultant for The Sullivan Group, a provider of patient safety, risk management & performance improvement solutions for healthcare professionals. At the Sullivan group he has taken a lead role in the emergency department electronic information systems development and implementation.