

Lance L. Goberman, MD, JD, ABAM

Dr. Goberman completed a residency in internal medicine in 1982 at Cooper Hospital, University Medical Center Camden, New Jersey. He then practiced emergency medicine and primary care. He joined the American Society of Addiction Medicine in 1987 and is currently board certified in addiction medicine and practices addiction medicine in New Jersey. He is the inventor of rapid opiate detoxification and naltrexone pellets for which he holds United States patents. Dr. Goberman graduated from the Widener University, School of Law in 2004 and is a member of the bar in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. In addition to practicing addiction medicine, he is associated with Interlock Device of New Jersey and has been accepted in many jurisdictions as an expert in addiction medicine and evidentiary breath testing.